Extracts from the solo exhibition catalogue 'Alex Kremer: Selected Works 1996-2007', Gordon Gallery, Tel Aviv (2007):

«...If I were to attempt to summarize Alex Kremer's work in one word, I would choose the word 'thicket': the branches of a bush or a tree caught together, or, metaphorically, a 'thick' matter, a complex thing...»

«...A typical Kremer painting is endowed with a sort of nervous tension that cannot be handled but by standing directly in front of the painting. Therefore the painting offers you, sometimes, an exit, hurling you beyond itself. It occurs symbolically with motifs such as traveling cars, buses climbing an ascent, the prow of a ship, flying arrows, and out-of-bounds signatures, but also in a material sense, in the way in which Kremer uses color...»
